WORLD'S SERIES SPORTLIGHTS--No.1

Introducing Tristram Speaker, Star of the Bostons' Great Trio of Outfielders

Probably the strongest asset of the Boston American League team, not even excepting its remarkable pitcher, Joe Wood, and one that should prove a potent factor in the coming World's Series, is its wonderful outfield. Experts of the present day freely concede that Hooper, Speaker and Lewis comprise the strongest combination of baseball efficiency that has ever decorated the scenery of the outlying meadows, even surpassing the famous old Baltimore trio in all-around effectiveness. Fleet of foot, sure of eye, has ever decorated the content and a sever decorated the content and a sever decorated the content and a sever dependent of the case require, and fast on the bases, this trio of speedy outer gardeners have gone far toward making the Boston team's success, and have added much instre to the performance of Joe Wood through their able aiding and abeting, both on the defense and attack. Messrs. Hooper, Speaker and Lewis will be the biggest obstacle Giant pitchers will have to contend with in the coming series.

The acknowledged star of this wonderful outfield is Tristram Speaker, the reason for Hubbard City, Texas, which is really not a city at all, but a cluster of huts near Dallas that boasts a population of 894 after the apring training season opens and 835 when Tris gets back. There are many experts who contend that Speaker is the peer of any outfielder who ever butted into a box score, and they'll argue a Ty Cobb adherent blue in the gills in support of this contention at that. Eliminating the sensational Cobb person from the case, and all opposition to this contention fades away into a pale blue mist, Speaker drawing the verdict by acclamation.

Mauling the missile up around the 400

damation. Mauling the missile up around the .400 mark all season, fast on the bases and as element of worry to the opposing pitcher. Tris Speaker has been the backbone of the Red Sox assault, while his sensational fielding and remarkable throwing abilities have been a tower of strength on the defense. Speaker is now engaged in a catch-as-catch-can grappling match to wrest the batting premiership of the great throbbing world of baseball from Tyrus Raymond Cobb, while all that is required to transform him into a racing automobile on the runaways is a little louder exhaust.

In order to approximate some adequate idea of what might reasonably be expected of Speaker and his dreaded mace in the coming combat with the Giants for the highest honors of baseball, we will delve into the musty archives of the past and produce the mildewed records his murderous bludgeon mauled out of these aame Giant hurlers in the interleague clash between Giants and Red Sox in the fall of 1900. In the opening combat of that series, October 8, 1909, the only game of the series that was won by the Gianta, Speaker whaled the famed "fadeaway" of Christy Mathewson for three solid clouts, and then repeated in the second contest by smearing Wiltse and Marquard for three more hits and crossing the plate with three of the runs that beat the Giants. On October 11, on the Boston field, Speaker busted a 44 tie and won the third consecutive victory of the series for his team by mauling Otis Crandall for a home run in the ninth inning, and in the final game of the series at the Polo Grounds, on October 14, Speaker again smeared Crandall for two long clouts that drove in three of his team's five tallies.

As every World's Series has preduced a hero, some one player whose individual achievements in the short series of games have proved the potent factor in deciding the result, in the light of past performances, what is more likely than that the coming fuss along the brown October trail will find the big bludgeon of Tris Speaker whaling a gash through the Hall of Fame.

The playing of Eddie Collins was a distinct feature. In the first game he equalled his record of base stealing pillering six sacks. In the seventh he swiped second, third and home; he also sourced three runs and poled four hits. Planks pitching was too much, while Napier was casy as a rescuer for Allison.

The rest of the candidates trying for the team are: Balley, Smith, Fishburne, of Roanoke High School: Hopkins, Douglas, Mears, Compton, Scott and Gibeons. Furgeson, a man from Randolph-Macon Academy, will likely make good in the backfield, and Legge, another new man, will probably hold a place in the line.

Ives, who was elected captain last year, was called home, and will be unable to return. He will be sorely missed. Ives was one of the best punters in the State last year and a splendid broken field runner.
